The Providence revenue office complains that the people of Pawcatuck, in the town of Stonington, are not careful in filling out their income blanks. They should make it clear that they live in Pawcatuck, Conn., and not in Westerly, R. I. In many places they give the number and name of the street and show that they live in Westerly, R. I. Confusion results in that the blanks are often sent to Providence when they should be sent to Hartford, and when they are correctly sent to Hartford the authorities there are likely to forward them to Providence.
